BJU Review

Fall 2000

From The Refrigerator Door

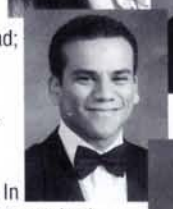
This past April the University Debate Team won the national championship of the National Educational Debate Association in Illinois. Samuel Bray, junior prelaw major, and Josh Crockett, senior, took first place in the varsity division. Sam Bray was also recognized as the top speaker at the tournament. Additionally, Dr. Dewitt Jones, coach of the team, received the president's Award for outstanding debate program. In six tournaments, the BJU Debate team took five first place awards and one second. In two tournaments' novice divisions, BJU also took first.

Dr. Peter Davis, head of the piano department, recently received the following awards from the University of Oklahoma where he did doctoral work in piano pedagogy: the Jewel Nelson Luccock Memorial Scholarship, the Alice & Albert Kirkpatrick award, and the Gail Boyd de Stwolinski award.



The following students won their category and sang at the honors recital at the USC student auditions for the SC chapter of National Association Teachers of Singing: Ashley Eby, '00 Bob Jones Academy grad; Brandi Icard, sophomore voice major; Chris Sligh, junior voice major; and Jesse Garcia, senior voice major. In addition the following received honors ratings and eligibility for regional competition: Sarah Biddle, BJA; Charissa Burris, sophomore voice major; Kristin Taylor, sophomore elementary education major; Kerry Waite, sophomore humanities major;

Joe Sutton, BJU special education professor, was elected treasurer of the National Council for Educational Diagnostic Services for a two-year term.

Matthew O'Dell, senior piano performance major, won first place in the Piano Concerto Competition sponsored by Gardner-Webb University in Boiling Springs, NC.

Rev. Stephen Jones, '92 public speaking grad and '96 masters of divinity grad, has been appointed to the office of Vice President for Administration and will oversee the areas of admissions, public relations, advertising, campus events, fund-raising, financial aid and student recruitment.

The Collegian, BJU's student newspaper, took first place with Special Merit in this year's American Scholastic Press Association contest, garnering a total of 970 out of 1000 points, which put them at the top of the division. Ben Szobody sports editor and '00 journalism grad, also took first place in the Feature Writing category in the 1999 SC Press Association Collegiate Division Contest and Jenny Kimmel, copy editor and junior public relations journalism major, claimed third place in the News Story category.

Cheryl T. Miller, '87 professional accounting grad, received the SC Credit Professional of the Year award for 1999 and the Hutchison Award from the South Carolina Credit Professionals International.

Danny and Shirley (Polanskey) Hinton, '77 grads, recently won awards in the nationwide Greater Enid Video Festival, placing second in the Best Entertainment Video and New Producer categories. The Hintons have a weekly TV program called Hocus Focus, which teaches character qualities to children by using skits and illusions.

Brenda Schoolfield of the history faculty recently won a competition sponsored by Professional Women on Campus for her paper "Knowing Time(s): Towards an Understanding of Age Consciousness among American Slaves."

Carpentry Professional Needed
BJU is seeking a carpentry professional to teach in our carpentry program. The ideal applicant will have experience as a general contractor, a bachelor's degree in a related field, and a desire to serve the Lord in a Christian ministry. For more information, call Aaron Goldsmith at (864) 242-5100, Ext. 2900 or e-mail agoldsmi@bju.edu.

Facilities Management has employment opportunities for those with construction, electrical, plumbing, and HVAC experience. If interested, please call (864) 242-5100, Ext. 4483 for further details.

Come See Us

High School Festival and Preaching Conference
October 31-November 3

High school students from all over the United States meet at BJU for an exciting time of competition. They compete for awards, but are also evaluated and helped by Bob Jones University faculty and staff. The preaching conference for young men includes a preaching competition as well as an extemporaneous outline competition. For a free brochure, send in the response card, call (864) 242-5100, Ext. 3120, or e-mail reservations@bju.edu.

Thanksgiving

It's that time again. Join us for the exciting Turkey Bowl competition and Thanksgiving celebration. Come see Shakespeare's Henry V and enjoy the beautiful campus. For a free brochure, send in the response card, call (864) 242-5100, Ext. 3120, or e-mail reservations@bju.edu.

the what team?

You've probably heard about or seen BJU's music or drama teams that travel the country. But our science team?

"Most schools we visit don't realize that BJU has a science program, let alone a science team," says Josh Tuttle, senior physics major and member of the current team. "I frequently hear, 'I had no idea BJU had a science program.' Most of the people think that state schools are the only place they can go to get a decent science education."

"The purposes of the science team are to get students interested in science, and to get those who are interested in science to come here for training," says Dr. George Matzko, chairman of the Division of Science. "We need to get the message out that BJU's science program is something unique." The BJU science team has been quietly spreading the news since 1993. "When it comes to undergraduate science programs, no other Christian college offers the depth of science training. For example, we have 13 full-time science teachers with PhDs," Dr. Matzko says.

"BJU seems to have a deeper science program than most Christian colleges I looked into," says junior Justin Tarlton, also a science team member.

Back on the Road

The BJU Science team travels for one week twice each year to five different schools doing 60 to 70 presentations. "We do classes all day long, depending on how big the school is," Dr. Matzko says. "We have a biology person, a physics person, and a chemistry person. We can all work independently of each other, so our team can be in three places at one time. We usually do at least one chapel service a day, as well, where we show the BJU's Science Division video, and our students give their testimonies."

This is where Josh and Justin come in. "I thought it would be an exciting chance to use the things that I had learned in my years at college," Josh says. "I like the interaction with the kids. I get interaction here at school, but not on the same level."

"We do want to identify schools where we can be of help," Dr. Matzko says. "Sometimes the schools will ask us for suggestions as to how to improve their science program. We can really strengthen the science teachers in their ministries. A lot of these are real heroes of the faith, in the trenches trying to do something for the Lord."

The Benefits of Traveling

"Everyone I've taken on the team has said that it's been helpful for their future," Dr. Matzko says. "The students get to see the needs in five different schools and a future for themselves. Even science people who aren't education majors have lots of opportunities."

"It was a new experience for me to walk into a classroom and know that I had fifty minutes to be a teacher," Josh says. "I enjoyed it. It was a big responsibility. In some of the schools we had class almost every hour, as a real teacher would have. It was tiring, but very rewarding and fulfilling."

"It's given me a burden not necessarily for science or even teaching, but just for the younger age groups, that I've overlooked before," he says. "It was neat to be able to work with them and to be able to interact with them between classes. I also enjoyed the opportunity to have chapel with the students each day and to stand up and give my testimony of why I feel like the Lord called me into science."

"I would recommend this to students, especially for science education majors," Justin says. "You get to see the schools' needs and facilities. The team gave me a little more of a hands-on experience with classroom management. I was able to put into practice some of the classroom things that I had learned on the education side of the major."

The Future

"Since 1993, we've basically sent about two teams a year," Dr. Matzko says. "We go in January and in May, times when other schools are still in session, but we're not. For the future, my plan is to broaden the participation among the faculty so that more of us are involved. It's good for us to see what's going on out there in the Christian schools as far as science goes. It also helps us in preparing for our classes here. I think the important thing is not just sending out more teams, but sending out teams where we can do the most good.

"At the Principals' Recruitment Conference I saw one of the principals whose school we had visited. The kids were still talking about the science presentations," Justin says. "I was overwhelmed that it had made that big of an impact on them."

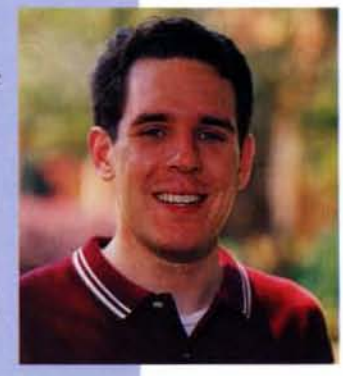
The Benefits of a BJU Science Undergraduate Education

You may be surprised to discover that even secular university undergraduate science programs don't always stack up to the undergraduate science program offered at BJU.

"What you'll find with large state schools is that most of the equipment is reserved for graduate students," Dr. Matzko says. "I've had speakers from other schools say that we are able to do a better job for the undergraduate students because that's what we emphasize here. At BJU, we have the equipment we need for the undergraduate level, and we even have some undergraduate research going on here as well. That's the message we try to get out to the students. For undergraduate work you're almost always better off going to a four-year liberal arts college."



"Most schools offer basic biology, chemistry and physics, but not many Christian colleges on the undergraduate level that I've found offer invertebrate zoology, cell biology and the opportunities for research that BJU offers," Justin says.

"When universities have a graduate programs, it detracts in many cases from the undergraduate program," Dr. Matzko says. "The undergraduate teachers are often graduate assistants just out of college themselves, and since they are frequently from other countries, their English is poor."

"I have friends that are in science programs at other schools who can't even understand what their teachers are saying," Josh says. "My classes aren't taught by graduate assistants, and I consider that a bonus of being at BJU. I'm taught by a PhD in every one of my science classes; that's a benefit that other people don't get.

"Also, here our teachers show us how we can apply the things we're learning to our lives and to the Bible," says Rumi Kawase, a sophomore pre-vet major. "Here my knowledge is widened, and I'm not just learning science."

"Above the other benefits, BJU offers a biblical basis which I feel is almost more important with science than with other subjects, because of the humanism that you'll find in science at secular schools," Josh says. "I expect to confront that in graduate school, so I knew a good foundation is something that I really needed before graduate school. I feel that BJU prepares people very well to go out into a secular workplace or a secular university."

"I think BJU is covering everything that I'll have to know for grad school," Rumi says. "So many grad schools require certain classes, and it's as if we're already covering such classes now."

The Weather

As I write this, it's beautiful—absolutely gorgeous: 75°, cloudless, with a light breeze. At least for now. In 3 hours? Well...that's anyone's guess. Greenville's weather is probably best described as pleasant, but fickle. Greenville does have four seasons as you and I know them, although fall tends to be a slightly cooler extension of summer, and spring warms up early. Winters are mild, but we still do see the occasional snow. Yep, snow—right here in the south (that may be particularly good news for the northerners who miss their beloved blizzards). So to sum it all up, bring your sunscreen, umbrella, winter coat, boots, and your spring jacket. Who knows which you'll make the most use of. My guess would be the sunscreen...no, the umbrella...no, the sunscreen...

Student Leadership

If you've always had a hankering to clamber up on a soapbox and "rally the troops," here's your chance—BJU offers dozens of leadership positions to students, from the school yearbook staff to Mission Prayer Band to the Community Relations Council (CRC) to the campus TV and radio stations—there are plenty of organizations to lead.

A few of BJU's other student organizations are (prepare for a lot of letters here): ISC (Inter Society Council), FCSF (Family & Consumer Science Forum), ISDA (Inter Society Debate Association), ACT (Association of Christian Teachers), UBA (University Business Association), Modern Language Club, the Ministerial Class, and The Collegian staff.

These student organizations provide services to the students as well as leadership opportunities. For example, CRC provides students with chances to get involved in the community through cleaning up a park (if wading through knee-deep muck is your kind of thing) or helping with Special Olympics. The Collegian enlists a staff of writers, photographers and designers who forgo some sleep to produce the campus newspaper. The opportunities to get involved are great; now there's just the problem of choosing between them. (And if you can't find anything of interest here...well, there's always schoolwork.)

Mission Teams

What other way would you find yourself eating haggis or kim-chi? For 24 years, BJU has been sending students, faculty and staff on mission teams to countries all over the globe. This summer alone, BJU sent out eleven official teams, which include over 140 students, faculty and staff members, to Korea, Dominica, St. Kitts, Shanghai, Australia, Mexico, Canada, and Russia. Other years include teams to Britain, France, Germany and Kenya. Often students return after graduation to continue work in the areas they visited as students. God is using these trips to change the lives of BJU students who are willing to go. Trips like these leave students with memories and spiritual lessons that will last a lifetime. After all, it's not every day you get to wake up with a snake hanging outside your window, or feast on the...well, we'll let you find out what haggis is for yourself.

The President's Corner

Does your heart ever burn in righteous indignation within you?

What about when you read that President Clinton declared June 2000 to be Gay and Lesbian Pride Month, accompanied by all the sympathetic rhetoric he could muster to elicit support for perversely aberrant lifestyles?

What about when you saw that frightening photograph of the armed-to-the-teeth storm trooper whom Janet Reno ordered to Elian Gonzales' house to snatch him away?

What about when you hear of another church that formerly preached and defended the Scriptures but has now decided to be a "fun and games" center, trivializing the Gospel, and calling itself "seeker sensitive"?

What about churches who contemporize their theology and let the culture define their faith, their practice, and their preaching?

The Church is being handed over to the Antichrist. America is being delivered up for destruction into the hands of paganism. The foundations are being destroyed. What can the righteous do?

We can serve God with new passion. We can proclaim the Bible with unwavering confidence and audacity. We can indoctrinate our children and our congregations in the Holy Scriptures. We can give them God's perspective. We can declare the rights of King Jesus. We can uncompromisingly take our stand and be unashamed of the Gospel of Christ. We can evangelize sinners, as Christ commissioned His disciples to do, in spite of the political incorrectness of it and the coming persecution because of it. We can fight the good fight. We can finish the course. We can keep the faith, because there is laid up for us a crown of righteousness.

In short—we can do what the Early Church did and what all true believers have always done in the face of persecution from unfriendly governments. To do less is to betray Jesus Christ and to bear the name "Christian" unworthily.

God has given to Bob Jones University the mission of training New Testament Christians. We are passionate in the doing of it and dedicated to the calling of it. All young people with hot hearts for God who want to join us for training in Christian warfare are welcome. —Bob Jones III

Just Around the Corner—

the new MBA program at BJU

For years, if you wanted an MBA degree, you had limited choices: you could spend a fortune and a couple of years at a large MBA program, or you could cram it into a few years' worth of evenings and weekends at a nearby college.

But starting in Fall 2001, BJU is offering an alternative, when it launches its own master in business administration degree program.

"Our research showed that there is a huge need, not for just any MBA program, but for a Christ-centered MBA," says Mr. Mike Buiter, director of MBA programs and former Vice President of Finance for the Dr Pepper Company. "BJU's MBA program will combine excellent academics with a unique blend of practical, hands-on training from accomplished Christian professionals around the country."

"In 1990, Dr. Bob III told us he wanted to start a master of business administration program at BJU," says Dr. Dick Stratton, dean of the School of Business. "With God's help, next fall we'll be fulfilling that vision."

What's the Background?

This isn't just your ordinary MBA program. "The whole idea here is to train lay people to be effective ministers in local churches," Mike says. "We feel that some of the best businesses for lay people to be in today are small to medium businesses that give them more freedom to be effective in the local church setting."

"Our goal is to partner with the local church," Dick says. "We want to send graduates out that will be a support to those churches."

"We also determined that this MBA program can make an impact by doing something different," Mike says. "Our focus is on innovative thinking in both large and small settings."

Instruction will stress both entrepreneurship, to help students start or manage small to medium businesses; and intrapreneurship, to give those who work for larger corporations the training to develop ideas for those companies. "We want to make sure that they have the skills taught in traditional MBA training, but also skills in technology, innovation and e-commerce as well, all built on a core MBA program," Mike says.

"I received a world-class business education from BJU in the 1960s. My experience with BJU business graduates seeking entrance into the master's and doctoral programs here at Virginia Tech continues to provide evidence that the academic standards are being maintained. I believe there is a well-qualified faculty in place to provide a first-rate MBA program."

–Wayne Leininger, '65 accounting grad, Director of the Department of Systems and Accounting at Virginia Tech

Can I Fit This In?

That's the beauty of this program—you probably can. The MBA program is specially designed for those *for students with a non-business background

"BJU's top-flight business program attracts a rich pool of highly motivated students. The school is blessed with a dedicated faculty with excellent academic and corporate experience. BJU develops character as well as intellect, providing the business world with uniquely qualified graduates."

who are working full time and will combine limited campus instruction with distance courses via satellite.

"The program is designed to accommodate the schedule of busy executives," Mike says. "The distance education portion of the program is delivered by satellite on six weeknights per month directly to the home or office to minimize commuting. Classes will meet on the BJU campus only one weekend each month for a full day of classes both Friday and Saturday."

About the Program

"The classroom teachers are people who are spiritual examples and role models, but we also plan to incorporate testimonies and devotional speakers during the Friday night classes," Mike says. "These speakers will include businesspeople who come to give their personal testimony of what God is doing in their lives.

"This program will be unique in the use of PhDs as well as adjunct professors," Mike says. "Adjunct professorship allows us to bring people from all over the country: Christian business-people who aren't able to teach for a semester, but could come and speak for a few hours. These are people active in their churches and active in helping ministries around the country. They can give the MBA students a wider range of knowledge, background and experience."

> "The success attained by many of the BJU business graduates in the workforce is testament to the demanding academic standards of the University and to the devotion of the godly faculty who have dedicated their lives to train students both in the application of the most updated business techniques as well as in keeping a Biblical perspective toward developing a balanced and accomplished lifestyle."
> –William Morris, '85 management grad, Vice President International Sales, Bowater Incorporated

And you don't have to be a business genius to enroll in the program. The first semester, titled "Introduction to Business," is for students with little or no business training. The introductory material will include training in accounting, computer literacy, and basic business math skills.

In the later semesters, the fast-paced program covers quantitative and cased-based approaches to managerial decision making. "Courses in statistics and operations management will provide a foundation for optimizing plant management," Mike says. "Accounting, corporate finance and advanced economics will aid in financial decision making."

"The program will also provide a case-based approach to dealing with marketing strategy and management effectiveness," he says. "Speakers from companies will share their experiences; then the students will be able to study cases directly related. These people are showing the students exactly what they are going to be doing when they get out there. For example we won't be teaching just marketing statistics, instead we'll have a marketing professional come in and give real life problems in marketing."

This new program will enable many Christians to get the MBA that they've always wanted in a way that's Christ-centered, practical, and flexible.

"You can use the home page to keep track of your daily Bible reading, find an encouraging devotional article from past issues of BJU publications, and listen to a past chapel message from your favorite speaker. There's also the Linked Word Project, which links each word or phrase in the Bible to the underlying lexicon meaning for the English word. It also links to the parsing information for each verb."

edu

It's one of the most ambitious university websites out there with over 5,900 web pages currently on the site and more being added weekly. www.bju.edu gets over 6,000 visits a day, but, according to Mr. Jonathan Pait, BJU webmaster and community relations coordinator, the number of visits nearly tripled during the recent assault by the media during the Republican primary. Here's a brief overview, but it's best if you check it out yourself.

ACCESS SITES

"Currently, BJU can be accessed through three locations," Jonathan says. "www.bju.edu is the primary academic and promotional site for all things about Bob Jones University."

"www.bjup.com came on line in 1998 as the domain for the BJU Press," Jonathan says. "It not only provides information about BJU Press services, but also allows individuals and Christian schools to purchase BJU Press materials online." You'll also find the Balance, a publication of the School of Education, with articles for Christian school leaders as well as helpful hints from Tips for Teachers and Home School Helper, both publications of the BJU Press.

"www.bjunet.com is the gateway for those interested in a safe portal for launching into the Internet and lists sites collected by users who share your values," Jonathan says. "www.bjunet.com lists sites such as sports, business, shopping and other topics are categorized for easy access. You can build your own home page listing your favorite sites, favorite contacts, and put weather information for your city or any city around the world at your fingertips."

The Web Team

Affectionately known as the "spiders" for their work on the web, these are the people who maintain the BJU website:

Mr. Jonathan Pait–community relations coordinator, webmaster

Mr. Dave Smith–graduate assistant, assistant webmaster

Mrs. Donna Neumann–content proofreader

Jed Spraul–sophomore computer science major, programmer.

These four spend about one hundred hours a week maintaining, changing, and updating the site and keeping it in constant flux.

I believe in the inspiration of the Bible
(both the Old and the New Testaments);
the creation of man by the direct act of God;
the incarnation and virgin birth of our LORD and Saviour, Jesus Christ;
His identification as the Son of God;
His vicarious atonement for the sins of mankind
by the shedding of His blood on the cross;
the resurrection of His body from the tomb;
His power to save men from sin;
the new birth through the regeneration by the Holy Spirit and the gift of eternal life
by the grace of God.
Not every day the preacher's soul is fired.
But when the spark is there, foundations quake
And mountains move. Then sinful hearts, inspired
By judgment fears, to penitence awake.
Spirit anointed, most imperfect clay
Becomes a golden vessel for God's Word,
Which, overflowing, heals and cleans away
Black doubt and hind'ring fear. Then Christians stirred Know rushing mighty wind, baptising fire.
Speaks such a preacher with a prophet's tone,
By love consumed, revival his desire,
Blessed beyond measure, pulpit then a throne.
Give to this preacher now the heavenly pow'r
My people wait. Make this the shining hour.
